Frontier Airlines classifies missed flights under their “no-show” policy. If you fail to board your flight without notifying the airline, your ticket may be canceled, and change fees may apply. However, depending on your fare type and circumstances, you may still have a chance to rebook.

Key Points:

- Basic Economy and Discount Den fares: Often have stricter rules; limited flexibility.
- Standard or Flexible fares: May allow rebooking or applying travel credits if you act quickly.
- Emergency situations: Frontier agents may make exceptions for missed flights due to delays, illness, or other valid emergencies.
