1. Understanding Frontier’s Ticket Transfer Policy

Frontier Airlines is an ultra-low-cost carrier (ULCC), meaning its base fares are low, but services such as ticket transfers, rebooking, and seat selection often come with restrictions or fees.

- Frontier generally does not allow transferring tickets to another person.
- Name changes for the same passenger are permitted, but ticket ownership cannot be reassigned.
- Travelers can cancel or use travel credits instead of transferring a ticket.

2. Why Frontier Restricts Ticket Transfers

Frontier restricts ticket transfers due to:

- Security regulations: Airlines must match passenger names to government-issued ID.
- Fraud prevention: Prevents resale or unauthorized use.
- Pricing structure: ULCC fares are tied to individual passengers; transferring tickets would undermine pricing models.

3. Alternative Options If You Cannot Transfer a Ticket

Even though Frontier does not allow direct transfers, there are ways to minimize loss:

3.1 Name Corrections

- Minor spelling errors can be corrected for a fee
- Requires verification via Frontier account or phone

3.2 Cancel and Use Travel Credit

- Tickets can be canceled for travel credit (less than ticket value)
- Credits valid for future travel within the airline's rules

3.3 Rebooking or Rescheduling

- Rebook the same passenger on a different date
- Fees vary depending on fare type and timing

4. Step-by-Step Guide to Handling a Ticket You Cannot Use

1. Log in to your Frontier account.
2. Navigate to “My Trips”.
3. Check if you are eligible for name correction, cancellation, or travel credit.
4. Contact Frontier via phone for assistance with options and fees.

5. Fees Associated with Alternatives to Ticket Transfers

Even though you cannot transfer a ticket, alternative options come with associated costs:

- Name corrections: $50–$125 depending on fare type
- Cancel and get travel credit: May incur service fees; credit may not equal ticket value
- Rebooking: Fare difference + service fee

6. Handling Group Bookings

Group bookings add complexity:

- Individual tickets within a group cannot be transferred to another person

- Name corrections may be possible for each passenger separately
- Canceling a group can provide travel credit for future use

7. International Tickets and Transfers

- Frontier's international tickets follow the same rules: no transfers allowed
- Travel credits or rebooking is the main solution
- Extra fees may apply for international flights
